

THE CHRONICLE.

VOL. V.

RAYMOND, ALBERTA, MAY 6, 1907

NO. 2

Communicated

Thos. H. Woolford, on the relationship of Agriculture to prosperity.

A plain and interesting statement from a capable farmer.

Carlston Alta

April 20th, 1907

John Powelson, Esq.

President A. F. A.

Raymond Alta

Friend John,

Just a few words in regard to that telegram and its effects. As you are aware I sent it to Martin Woolf, the President of our Board of Trade, knowing full well that the farmer as well as the business men's interest will be safe guarded at that preliminary meeting of the Western Canadian Irrigation Convention to be held in Calgary some time in July.

Mr. Woolf is a broad-minded man upon all matters pertaining to the upbuilding of the Western Provinces, nothing narrow about him not even to his stature, but from the ground up. H. Mr. Woolf received it O.K. at the time, grasped the situation, proceeded to draft a resolution covering the ground completely enough that all those interested in and take through their representatives in they may choose through various organizations, viz. Boards of Trade, Farmers Association, Agricultural Societies, Municipalities, Stock Breeders Association, School Districts rural and otherwise etc., etc. so that all may be represented if they choose. I for one feel gratified to Mr. Woolf for his prompt and wise action in the matter because as I look at this question it is not to benefit any particular person, Corporation, Organization or avocation but all of the Province and when the Province is benefited the Dominion as a whole cannot help but share in her general prosperity.

If as you say, some of your Business men accuse the members of the A. F. A. of being agitators thank them for the accusation, and say that we expect to agitate for organization among the Farmers as we never have before.

The farmer is an important factor in settling up the great North West and he is the one who is expected to produce the extra wealth by diverting these mountain streams from their natural channels and scattering them over this vast semi arid country.

The Farmer and Pioneer is, the base and foundation of all other enterprises for which he prosper, whose prosperity is in proportion to his prosperity and I know of no other town in the West that should know this better than Raymond.

It is not the purpose of the A. F. A. to antagonize other organizations but work in harmony with them along upon the lines of equal rights to all and special privileges to none.

The Farmers in the past has been dubbed Hayseed Clod Hopper etc. But thanks to the farmer himself and to some broad minded statesmen, together with the leading Educators of the country, The Farmer is forthcoming to the front where he belongs. He is much in evidence and election and it is no more than right that he should be heard when he is in session and not only heard but his demand considered and granted in as much as it is just and equitable. We ask nothing more, we will be contented with nothing less, so let the good work of organization go on until every farmer was lined up in the ranks for this purpose.

1. To forward the interests of the producers of grain and live stock in every honorable and legitimate way.

2. To hold meetings for the discussion of subjects pertaining to the production of grain and live stock and the best means of marketing the same.

3rd. To encourage the production of superior varieties of grain and the breeding and rearing of improved stock.

4th. To encourage the establishment of industries which will give the producer greater facilities for their produce.

5th. To obtain by united effort profitable and equitable prices for farm produce.

6th. To watch legislation pertaining to farmers' interests. Particularly that affecting the marketing and transporting farm produce.

7th. To suggest to Parliament from time to time as it is found necessary through only appointed delegates the passing of any new legislation to meet changing conditions and requirements.

Yours respectfully,

Thos H. Woolford

Vice President,

Alberta Farmers Association.

My Wives Family.

The musical force My Wives Family

ily was presented at the Meeting House last Thursday to a fairly good house. The piece is one tangled complicated mass of situations always keeping the audience in a laughing condition. One incident leads to another until finally in the last everything is solved and things are straight again.

Mr. Stevens as the son in law and Dr. Knott kept the audience in an uproar by their antics and vaudeville "stunts." Their song "Do Re Mi" etc was catchy and well rendered. Their drunken scene was the hit of the evening.

Mr. "Noah Nagg" was good and pleased his audience, while the college boy took his part well and the dancing was good.

Of the ladies the mother in law was far and away the best doing her part in a snappy and pleasing manner. The wife maid and actress did well.

The Company presented Saturday a piece entitled a "Double Elongement" to a fair house.

Bonus on Sugar Beets

Arrangements have been completed whereby a reduction in the transportation rates from the C. P. R. irrigated block east of Calgary to Raymond has been made by the two railway companies over whose lines the beets would be handled.

By this reduction beets on that area are worth $4.60 per ton and the Canadian Pacific Irrigation Colonization company realizing the advantage of this reduction on an extensive scale in the Irrigation block would have in hastening the day when a sugar factory would be operation, have decided to give a bonus of 40 cents per ton until such time as a factory is established.

This makes beets worth $5.00 per ton and places beet growers in that locality on equal footing with those within a mile of the Raymond factory.

Celebration In

Lethbridge

Lethbridge April 24.—The program for the Natal day celebration of the city of Lethbridge on May 9, has been finally matured and the prospects are that it will eclipse all previous efforts in the West. The appropriations have been made for the various sub-committees including a handsome sum for prizes for the best features of the parade and provision for a monster exhibition of pyrotechnics.

in the evening. The City of course bears the expense of the entire celebration including the expense of visiting bands and athletic teams. It is now probable that a large banquet at which the notables of the Province will be guests will be successfully arranged for and the largest floor space in Southern Alberta will be secured for banquet purposes.

The programme as finally arranged gives nearly the whole morning to the parade which in its various features will illustrate the progress of Lethbridge and the district of which it is the geographical and commercial centre. Among the divisions of the parade will be three bands the Lethbridge Cadets, a band of mounted Indians, the school children, athletic teams in uniform the fire brigade, a mercantile section of large proportions and a trade section will include every organized trade. The mercantile and trade sections will be gay with floats.

The afternoon attractions will be athletic matches on the public square free to all. A foot ball match between Maple Leafs of Lethbridge and either Coal Creek or Pincher Creek and a lacrosse match between Lethbridge and either Medicine Hat or High River.

The evening programme will be in many respects the best of the day consisting of a massed band concert on the public square while the fire works display is in progress the closing feature will be the banquet.

It is likely that special railway rates and trains will be arranged for to convey the hosts of visitors from all points between Cranbrook and Medicine Hat on the East and West and Great Falls and J. J. Johnston North and South. An accommodation committee is making ample arrangements for taking care of the visitors.

BURGHAM YOUNG, Editor.

MAY 9 1907.

Mr. John Halstead the Assistant General Freight Agent of the C. P. R. in conversation with a CHRONICLE representative suggested the importation of Hindu labor for the best fields, as they are intelligent faithful and industrious.

Alfalfa growing has passed the experimental stage where irrigation is to be had and every farmer should have a few acres producing this valuable feed.

It is only the "terra rich" that can afford to feed stock hay at present prices, and the quality of the expensive necessity is very poor. Alfalfa raising would remedy and improve these conditions and land owners under the canal should make it a part of their business to have some alfalfa.

There are thousands of trees in the vicinity of Raymond growing without irrigation, and what has been done by successful growers can be done by others. Trees will not only make the country more beautiful but will improve the climate and lessen the bad effects of the wind, and the value they add to the farm, home or ranch is incalculable.

Study your own profit and the public good by putting in trees.

The attention of the Farmers Association is respectfully directed to the consideration of the question of Local Improvement which when organized could see to the improving of our roads along the lines suggested by Mr. L. E. Townsend of the Wells Land and Cattle Co. farm.

It would be interesting to the general public to have our member Mr. Simmons address us on the advantages of the Local Improvement District, as doubtless there are advantages which if properly understood would induce our people to ask for their organization. It is a step that has met with popular favor in other communities and should here, while it is a move that would entail more responsibility it also means a larger measure of self government in the imposing and expenditure of our taxes.

The Farmers Association which is partly educational can be the means of giving us some good information along these necessary lines.

Mr. Muldoon the one time pugilist and heavy weight lifter was in Raymond this week and is to show here Wednesday evening next. Mr. Muldoon made some astonishing statements as to his powers with the gloves and dumb bells, not a single statement of which the whole CHRONICLE force disputed. This paper agrees with Mark Twain's alleged statement by a reporter on a paper published in Rome 1900 years ago in which he says, "no matter how severe this paper may be on women and caged tigers it would not knowingly offend a gladiator."

Hardly anything could make us take offense at Mr. Muldoon whom we hold in high esteem as an example of speed and strength.

Rich Man, Poor Man! *

By KEITH GORDON
Copyright, 1904, by Francis Wise

Before they reached the first ledge overlooking Bonanza a mist like fog of gloom of crushed pearl rolled noisily through the fissures of the hills and blotted out the village. The fog and the low clouds of the world. In the damp air the girl's hair fell on her face. She was nervous and he saw it when it framed the low forehead in so bewildering an arabesque of rings and curves and waves.

"You look rather small yourself," she smiled in response to his eloquent glance of approval. "Kuldever and a Kwikap and the jacket aren't half bad on you. Taken in connection with your old skin," she went on, throwing her head back and screwing up her eyebrows, "they make you a very presentable little fellow."

"I've sort of felt about that," he was the less sure. "This walk to Point Bonanza has an object."

She opened her eyes wide.

"Certainly," she assented politely. "Point Bonanza, for instance. If it has any other object," she went on sternly, "if you're going back to that old bluff, I want as a stop farther."

By the time they were moving in the midst of a cloud.

It was not long to the innocent.

"You mean—ah, with a fine imitation of 'impudence,' doesn't a girl ever look like a fellow—hasn't she a right to fancy himself to have with her and said so."

The pink of the girl's cheeks—it had the soft, round look that is equal for the stoutest of men. "You're a decent-looking fellow," she said, "but you're not a fellow to fancy himself to have with her and said so."

"You don't think I'm a fellow to fancy myself to have with her and said so," she said, "but you're not a fellow to fancy himself to have with her and said so."

etals fell from the girls' eyes, though she realized with a pang that it was too late. She had put the only thing that mattered out for her. She was thoughtless and careless as she would take a pebble from her pocket. She had not even realized what she was doing. Down below, where the Bradshaw fortune cut its course, everything had looked different. She had thought that with money all things else must fall into place, but she had cut off from the world, the Bradshaw wealth seemed less than nothing and the only thing.

Farther and farther the fog receded, showing this in spots but not calling the valley beneath them. But she was very sure now. Even when the world assumed its old proportions it would be the same. She had had her lesson. The Bradshaw was gone from her cheeks and her eyes were gray and unlight as she spoke.

"I'm not going to marry Great Bradshaw," she said steadily, "nor any other man when I don't love. So you see I can't help you after all. I don't think I could ever really have meant to do such a thing."

Her cheeks were pale, and the eyes that had been looking for his with a steady strength than any words suddenly filled with tears.

"I'm such a silly," she explained rather unconvincingly, "but I have to be so of such a thing. And I think you ought to be ashamed, Jack. You're a little fellow and you make much of yourself and—"

But he seemed to be paying no attention to her. With deep despair he was naming the buttons of his coat as if he were counting on his fingers.

"Rich man, poor man, bigger man, smaller man," he muttered to himself, "merchandise, Rich man, poorer man," he stopped, looking anxiously for another button, but there was no more.

"You see," she said triumphantly, "I've got you all right, a little fellow, your own coat too. And with a determined face, she counted the buttons. "Four buttons," she announced, "then something in his glance brought the beam back to her face and her head went down upon his shoulder."

This place in the fog gave way, leaving the jagged spaces that framed a beautiful picture. Down below, the water was shining on the blue water of the bay, not on the trees and bridges, for among them nestled the house of the town. The girl caught her breath. She felt it was a benediction. A benediction of the peace of the years to come.

"But what about our families?" she asked, a troubled voice in her ears. "Must have blotted out the pictures on her face. She laughed joyously.

"How else," he said, looking out at a brassy right angle.

Part and Flection.

When the celebrated John Timbs of London was summoned to the court of the newspaper he one day examined one of the said to occupy the top position in Kent and to read the journal an absolutely veracious account of his experience.

The faithful scribe to whom the task was intrusted performed his job with scrupulous care, and, as the paper, he spent a whole week among his temporary comrades.

He was of course he returned to the editorial office and produced his copy. Timbs read a portion of it and then burst into a great roar.

"This won't do at all, Mr. Smith," he said sternly. "Surely you must know this is far too good for insertion in our paper."

"I was afraid that might be the case," calmly replied the reporter. "Do you think this is better?"

"No," said Timbs, "it is not better. Timbs perused it and was delighted.

"The very thing, charming," he exclaimed. "That is what I want before I set out."—London Standard.

"Burning the Water."

Some readers will remember the spirited account given by Scott in "My Memories" of the form of salmon fishing that used to be known as "burning the water." It was a favorite amusement in England, Scotland and Wales. The practice is no longer legal and can be indulged in only at the risk of penalties, with the disgrace which attaches to things denounced as unsportsmanlike. Torches were used, and the salmon were speared by the thrust of a weapon having barbed points, called a lobster. Scott again is quoted for his description of the sport of salmon fishing from his book "The Salmon of the Tread," which is the story of his life's adventures. He was one of the worst offenders for "burning the water" in the days when it was permitted, and it was commented that thousands of salmon were annually taken by this form of capture. The water may be "burned" once now and then, and in Wales a few years ago there was a short-lived revival of the practice.

Mill of Creton.

Of the wonderful activities of all ages Milo of Creton is perhaps the most known. He shot a mile with an arrow on his shoulders, then with a blow of his fist killed the bear and ate it in one day. The strongest link could tell tales from Milo a journeyman who he held between his two fingers. He could jump by contracting his legs and muscles a cord tied around the forearm. One day, being in a house with some pupils of Pythagoras, he was threatened to fall in, but Milo supported the collapse on his feet, and by striking his forehead with his cap, he dashed it well known. He tried to tear down the front of the robe, but his hands set firmly in the robe, and, being unable to disengage them, he remained, surrounded by his pupils.

The Wells-Land and Carter Co. is making preparation to put in twenty acres of sugar beets on land above the ditch, believing the venture to be a safe one. Mr. L. R. Townsend the hunting manager is contemplating some important changes that will make the big farm of about eight sections one of the finest in the North West. He is an ardent advocate of the wide life range for farm work as well as road use claiming that it is an important factor in keeping roads good and making poor roads better. His advocacy of turning the main travelled roads which can be made with a grade at an expense of about $75.00 per mile. Is both wise and timely.

Last week a very notable and considerable increase was made to the population of Raymond in the addition of Mr. Brewerton's family to our not over crowded area. No attempt can be made to describe the members of the family as some subjects beggar description but suffice it to say the lady members of the family are all extremely nice, while the male members of the family being boys beggar description also. Such parents as Mr. and Mrs. Brewerton are public benefactors as the addition of a few colonies such as they have brought with them would make a nice little town wherever they pitched their camp.

New Dayton is another coming along the line of the A. R. and I, between Stirling and Warner. Already a hotel for 25 feet is completed and such accessories are being constructed, a store building is to be erected and a permanent foundation laid for a new and thriving metropolis. Adjacent to New Dayton are thousands of acres of choice farming lands which the Western Canada Land Company is putting on the market and before many months there but a short time since was just the vast silence of the prairie there will be a live bustling growing town.

She Hawaiian Death Prayer.

Upon the minds of such a people as the Hawaiians were, while under their ancient form of religion, it was but natural that superstition should gain a rooted hold. The most curious and effective belief to which they were made subject was that a man can be prayed to death, a belief that survives among the natives to the present day. For the success of the magical death prayer it was necessary to obtain some hair or a piece of finger nail of the intended victim. A priest was then employed to use incantation and prayer for his destruction. Always informed of the doom that the priest was invoking upon him, the victim generally pined away and died.

There is a story that an Englishman in the service of Kamehameha I. having incurred the displeasure of a priest, the latter proceeded to "remove" him by the death prayer process. The Englishman, however, set up an opposition after in derision and jokingly proclaimed that he intended to pray the priest to death. Alarmed at the threat and overwhelmed at the failure of his own incantation, the sorcerer died, proving by his death his faith in his religion.

The Social Capital.

We do not think that either Washington or New York or any other city will ever become the social capital of the United States. London is the social capital of Great Britain. Washington will come much nearer to it than it is now at present, but it is too big to have a social capital. Hordes of people will come to New York to make money, to assume themselves, to study, to live their lives in the least restricted atmosphere that the country offers, but only very rich people will come here to find and occupy a place in organized society. Pleasant people always find pleasant playmates here. There is no lack of good company for everybody that is sociable. But the charm of New York for people who still live elsewhere is not in its society, but in its shops and shows, its sunshine, its eating and its drinking. It is pleasant. It grows finer every day. When it is finished it will be a marvelous city, but hardly the social capital of the country.

A Finny Aerobate.

No two legs of the tarpon are quite alike. As the tarpon comes out into day his jaws distend, his gills flap open, and the mallet but dies out across the water for a hundred feet, while he stretches at the hook, shaking his head angrily from side to side, like a horse that fights his bit. In midlight he will turn and cut into the stream with a head on dive that makes a perfect cleavage of the whitened water. His next movement is to take a back somersault and his third a long distance jump with no height to it, but a substantial gain of a few feet. With infinite spirit he will continue his play until absolutely worn out, when the infinite and commencing lapse into a long, rolling stroke from side to side, showing the two foot dorsal fin, which waves and floats out behind, like some independent water creature—Country Life in America.

The Knowledge That Pays.

If you glance round that part of the world of our big men you will be surprised to see how many have made their reputation by doing one small thing, but doing it well. If a man gets to the front in one narrow subject the world credits him with knowledge of all the rest. It is, however, even easier to acquire a large general knowledge than an advanced special knowledge of one narrow subject. The latter must not be too narrow either. It is often said that the pursuit of knowledge has a utility in its own. But what knowledge? No knowledge is worth obtaining for its own or any other sake unless it is or will probably be useful to man.—James Swinburne in Electrical Review.

Could He Happier If We Wished.

If it is a fortunate time than ours when the resources of mind and body were less varied and plentiful than they are now, men and women took delight in life, warmed both hands at its fire and filled their hearts with joy and gladness, may we not conclude that they were happy simply because they lived, as we might, in the right way, and put to their right uses that which was provided for them?

Overeducated Hindoo.

There exists among India's educated classes a mad desire for professional vocations. Take a walk in certain streets in India, and you will observe a perfect panorama of signboard depicting the various callings, and the business houses are principally conspicuous by their absence.—Times of India.

Time to Begin.

Are you doing as much to brighten this world as a single sunbeam does? Are you scattering so much fragrance in the lives about you as is shed by one little violet? Do you refresh tired hearts as a drop of rain refreshes a drooping plant? If not, it is time to begin.

His Economy.

Wynne—Brown is very economical. Isn't he? Black—Brown? Well, I'll tell you. Brown is the sort of man who, when he wants an awl and hasn't any, instead of buying one will go to work to make one by straggleing out a corkscaw.
